1.1 Royal Institution of Surveyors Malaysia

The Surveyors were first recognised as a profession in year 1885 with the setting up of the Survey Department. Prior to March 1961, there were two professional bodies representing surveyors, The Malayan Institution of Surveyors (the former RICS Federation of Malaya Branch) and the Institution of Land Surveyors. History for surveyors was made on the March 13, 1961, when these two bodies met at the Boardroom of the Royal Selangor Club resolved to form then The Institution of Surveyors (Federation of Malaya). At the E.G.M held on 19th June 1966, the name of the Institution changed to the Institution of Surveyors, Malaysia.

His Royal Highness the Sultan of Selangor, Sultan Sharafuddin Idris Shah Alhaj Ibni Almarhum Sultan Salahuddin Abdul Aziz Shah Alhaj conferred the royal status to the Institution of Surveyors, Malaysia (ISM) on 28 March 2011. This royal conferment is the first ever bestowed to any professional body or NGO in Malaysia. Subsequently, the former name, The Institution of Surveyors Malaysia was changed to Royal Institution of Surveyors Malaysia (RISM). RISM is further elevated and needless to say proud to have His Royal Highness the Sultan of Selangor as its royal patron.

RISM is also the registered proprietor of the certification mark "Sr" and the registration is currently valid and subsisting under the Trademarks Act 2019. The Institution comprises four distinct but closely related Divisions i.e. Geomatics and Land Surveying Division, Quantity Surveying Division, Property Surveying Division and Building Surveying Division. The Divisional Chairs are members of the General Council which is the governing body of the Institutio

1.2 The Four Surveying Disciplines

A. Building Surveying (BS)

Building Surveyors offer specialist services on matters relating to building and facilities development. It involves project and construction development, maintenance management, building refurbishment, restoration and repairing works, building laws and regulations, demolition works and property redevelopment. A competent Building Surveyor is expected to manage, organize, supervise, monitor, evaluate and co-ordinate every aspect of building and development works and act as a vital link in the project between all the affiliated professionals such as architects, engineers, planners, and builders. In addition, a Building Surveyor also provides liaison and consultation services related to building inspection works with the public and local authorities for his/her client.

B. Geomatics and Land Surveying (GLS)

Geomatics and Land Surveyors (GLS) are generally related to the spatial science fields of geolocation, geospatial information and information technology, in which the measurement, management and analysis of the spatial information to enable correct decision making are made through mapping, cadastre, surveying, engineering, remote sensing (LiDAR or HDS scanning), underground utility detection and mapping, hydrography, photogrammetry, global navigation satellite systems (GNSS), seabed topographic mapping and geographic information systems (GIS) services. In a building project lifecycle, the services provided by GLS professionals cover beyond the planning and design phases, to extend through the entire life cycle of the project, including operation and end-of-life phases.

C. Property Surveying (PS)

Property Surveyors provide professional advisory services in the field of valuation of tangible and intangible assets, real estate transaction, property management and research in property market. This discipline is therefore concerned with land use control and economic aspects of land management on behalf of a wide variety of owners; land reform and land settlement which may be undertaken to achieve the best use of land and the best locations for human settlements, land valuation for a wide variety of private transactions or public actions affecting land; in which the surveyor's knowledge of the land market is of paramount importance. Members of this Division work as Valuers, Property Managers, Real Estate Agents and Property Consultant

D. Quantity Surveying (QS)

Quantity Surveyors specialise in the cost and financing of building and engineering contracts, from the first estimates to the final account for the project. They advise on the fixing of costs targets, the cost planning and design, the letting of a contract for the work, cost control during execution, and advice on contract administration. Their role is to ensure that their client obtains value for the money expended and that the resources of the construction industry are used to the best advantage of society.

Brochures and materials of the four surveying professions can be obtained from the Institution's website <https://www.rism.org.my>

The Royal Institution of Surveyors Malaysia (RISM) is the official professional body of the surveying profession in Malaysia consist of Building Surveyors, Geometrics & Land Surveyors, Property Management, Valuation and Estate Agencies Surveyors, and Quantity Surveyors. It represents and promotes the interest of the Surveyor and provides an avenue for interaction between members, related profession, government, and the public.
